After serving five years in prison for a crime he didn't commit, a bitter, violence prone Billy Brown is released. Unable to make good on a $10,000 sport bet, Billy had no choice than to take the fall for one of his bookie's pals. Billy blames his bad luck on Scott Woods, the athlete who lost the game. Now, Billy has one thing on his mind. Revenge.

Billy calls his parents, who have no idea he's in jail. They can't wait to see him and his new bride "Wendy", who Billy has been bragging about in letters. Frustrated and running out of excuses for showing up alone, Billy spots Layla, a young dancer coming out of a dance studio. He grabs her, forces her into her car and threatens to kill her unless she agrees to pose as his wife.

Frightened, yet intrigued by this brooding stranger, Layla agrees to go along for the ride. At his dysfunctional parents' home, Billy, like usual is ignored by his mother, a sports nut and his father, a cruel put down type of guy. Layla is an immediate hit as she takes to her role with enthusiasm, quickly transforming herself from a hostage into a member of the family.

Billy calls his old friend Goon who tells him he can find Scott at a local strip joint. After dinner, Billy and Layla leave his parent's house and check into a seedy motel. Knowing Billy plans to leave in the morning, Layla persuades him to take a bath with her. They spend a peaceful and innocent night together in each other's arms.

The next day, Billy heads for the strip joint where he finds Scott, a drunken, washed-up athlete as beaten down sad and lonely as himself. Billy walks away, realizing for the first time in his life, he really does have something precious to lose. A young woman who truly loves him...Layla.
