

Big Money

H 12-H
The producing duo of
Andre Link and John Dun-

ning, makers of the film Meatballs, have attracted big money from Hollywood studios for their two movies this year.

Paramount has picked up the Montrealers' $2.5-million thriller, My Bloody Valentine, with an all-Canadian cast of screen unknowns. The studio will invest another $2.5 million to launch its opening across North America in the spring.

And Columbia has pledged a $4-million advertising campaign for Happy Birthday to Me, a $4-million campus thriller starring Glenn Ford.

"We must be doing something right," Link says.